INTRODUCTION

1. INTRODUCTION

Royal Decree-Law 13/2010, of December 3, has introduced an important modernization process, dividing the airport and air navigation management functions that in Spain had been performed by the Entidad Pública Empresarial Aena, with the objective of improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the Spanish airport system.

Aena Aeropuertos is created within this modernization process and it shall be responsible for the management of the airports which until now had been managed by Entidad Pública Empresarial Aena.

The Council of Ministers on June 3, 2011 approved an agreement which authorizes the asset transfer from Aena to Aena Aeropuertos and a rise in the capital stock of the new company. These measures are necessary for Aena Aeropuertos to start functioning effectively, from June 8, 2011.

Aena Aeropuertos shall carry out all the duties and obligations developed by Entidad Pública Empresarial Aena until June 7, 2011 as regards management and operation of airport services, and any others that national or international law gives to the airport operator, in relation to the network integrated by airports and heliports managed by Aena.

From July 5, 2014, Aena Aeropuertos S.A changes its name into Aena S.A. The airports and heliports that it manages are the following:

Adolfo Suarez Madrid-Barajas and Barcelona-El Prat.

The subsidy must be requested during the month of January 2017, and will be met by Aena S.A. offsetting the amount to any amounts owed by the beneficiaries and, if it cannot be possible in whole or in part, by payment in cash before May 31, 2017.

Incentive for passenger growth on routes operated in the Aena network airports.

1. In 2016, air carriers operating in Spanish airports managed by Aena S.A are entitled to get an incentive for their contribution to the growth of number of passengers on the routes operated from Aena airports, compared with 2015.
2. For each company that increases the number of passengers carried, both at the airport where the route is operated and in the Aena network, the incentive will be calculated as an amount equivalent to the 50% of the average amount of passengers' charge of the route, and will be apply to additional passengers of the route in 2016 compared with 2015. The incentive that shall be entitled each airline operating the route in question will be proportional to its contribution to growth generated by all airlines operating on the same route.

In addition, if in 2017 the company keeps the number of departing passengers operated on that route in 2016, will benefit from an additional 25% to the same number of bonus passengers than in 2016 on the route in question.

For routes to destinations not operated in 2014 from an airport of Aena network, the incentive in 2015 will be the 75% of the average amount of passengers charge of the route, and additional 25% will be paid in 2017 if the company maintains at least 90% of departing passengers transported in 2016 on that route.

3. For each company, if the sum of passengers on routes of an airport that would qualify for incentives is higher than the number of passengers the company grows at the airport, the passenger figure to compute for the incentive will be the last. In this case, the distribution per route of the number of passengers shall be in proportion to the contribution of the company for the growth of each route.
4. For each company, if the sum of passengers considered by route, according to the preceding paragraph exceeds the number of passengers that the company grows in Aena network, the number of passengers to be considered for the incentive will be this last. In this case, the distribution per route of the number of passengers shall be in proportion to the passenger route resulting in the previous section.
5. For Canary Island airports, the incentive will be apply to the amount of passenger charge once applied subsidies for operations on certain days of the week in the Canary Airports.
6. The growth of each company may not be due to the mere transfer of passengers between companies within the same group, or agreements between companies to share their program or align strategies in order to access the incentive.
For these purposes, Aena will assess whether the increase in passengers of a company is because some of the above conditions, and has the power to nullify the incentive if it were so.
7. For the purpose of this incentive, route is defined as the set of operations of commercial air transport of passengers, departing from an airport of Aena S.A and destination another airport. It will be considered as the same route to the same destination, the one that even if it is operated at different airports, these are part of the same catchment area.
8. For the purpose of this incentive it is considered that a route to a destination has not been operated in 2015 if not exceeded 2.500 departing commercial passengers from the whole of that year. In this sense, to be considered route operated in 2016, the route to a certain destination must exceed 2.500 passengers in the whole of that year.

9. Incentives must be requested during January 2017 and will be met by Aena S.A. offsetting amount to any amounts owed by the beneficiaries if it cannot be possible in whole or in part, by payment in cash before the end of May 2017, and the amount corresponding to 2017 before the end of May 2018.
10. To receive the incentive, airlines must be up to date in their payments.
